

FUSHUN TOUR

Fushun, a key industrial and water-scarce city, has turned limitations into great strengths, firmly placing itself on the China map as a model city for sustainable development.

With a thriving water industry capable of developing a wellspring of solutions, the city will share its building plans for some of its mega water infrastructures. While visiting the facilities with local government officials, key product and technology providers, financial institutions and projects owners, you will hear about the planning of water resource management, wastewater recycling, and development projects.

The trip offers unique networking opportunities for you to meet potential business partners in these burgeoning markets.

